MECHANICS DISSATISFIED.

The machinists, carpenters, blacksmiths, electricians and bollermakers at the Highland Boy smelter appointed a committee to wait on the general man-ager to ascertain whether or not a nine-hour day is obtainable, to take effect Oct. 1. After a short consideration by the company the carpenters, boilermakers and head electricians were granted a nine-hour day. The machinists, blacksmiths and the remainder of the electricians were also let out 40 minutes sooner, but received a cut of 25 to 40 cents per day, a loss rather than a gain. Consequently the blacksmiths quit and are being followed by many others. It has been reported unless satisfactory arrangements are brought about many will go on a strike.
